A very pleasant episode took place during the evening. Bro. Clark, who retires from the secretaryship of the Conference, as a token of the esteem with which he is held by the Conference and the appreciation of his faithful services during the nine years in which he performed the laborious duties of this office, was presented by Bro. Time for adjournment is drawing rapidly near. While I pencil these words the Secretary is reading up the journal.

At the conclusion of the singing we were led in prayer by Dr. George.

The Bishop spoke very feelingly to the Conference as to the gratitude that he entertained for the Christian aud courteous treatment at the hands of the members of the Conference during his presidency over it. He said the appointments might not be as judiciously made as others might have done, but it was the very best that he and his advisers could do.

He proceeds in the reading of the appointments. He has coucluded. The appointments are read, and the members of the West. Virginia Conference are stationed for another year. The Doxology is sung, the Benediction pronounced, and we go forth to do and dare for God and truth.

Fellow Cirizers: My first knowledge of the beautiful and historic valley of Shenandoah was obtained in the Proigh school of the great civil war, and with the aid of very competent instructors, engaged on the opposite side of that terrible conflict. It is a great satisfaction to revisit the valley and to refresh my recollection of its auperb scenery, and of places made interesting and famous by the war. I now meet its people under circumstances far more subpletous than any of us, whether we were soldiers or citizens during the contest, could then have deemed possible within the period of our lives. For the first time in many years we see the American people in the midst of interesting and important events, with their attention chiefly engaged about questions relating to the material, and business interests of the country, and in regard to which in all the States the people are beginning to take sides without much reference to sectional or color line. Whatever evidences of bitterness may be exhibited in any other part of the country, we know that here the general wish is that the sectional controversies which have so long disturbed our American Society may be permanently settled, and in pursuance of the Constitution and laws the peace of the Union may be restored and forever firmly established. During the past month I visited agricultural fairs the people on those occasions, it seemed not improper to call their attention to the condition of the financial affairs of the United States. This was done with a double purpose. It was my hope that it would give encouragement and confidence to those who were looking anxiously but hopefully for better times. It hoped also that the facts and figures presented would aid in the formation of correct opinions on the subjects which, now mainly interest the people. With the same general purpose I now desire to spread before you very briefly the vi

The President here quoted from letters of Washington, Jefferson and Madison, and from a decision by Chief Justice Marshall, showing that they all favored hard money. He then continued as follows:

It is not necessary for my purpose to make further quotations from our fathers. They embodied their opinions in the American Constitution. The money of the Constitution is coin. In making money which has an intrinsic value, the Constitutional money of our country, our fathers. tional money of our country, our fathers adopted the money of the world. and common consent of mankind in all ages and countries, precious metals have been the measure of value of the money of the world. It is a law fundamental and irrepocable. It can no more be repealed by an act of Congress than the law of gravitation. If we would have an early return of business prosperity, let us not try to be wiser than our fathers, wiser than the Constitution, and wiser than human nature. In the present condition of our country our progress towards prosperity, as a nation and as individuals, depends upon having good public credit and sound constitutional currency.
